Dragontail Systems is Opening a Melbourne Based R&D Facility; Appoints CTO to Support Asia Pacific Growth

July 24 2017

Dragontail Systems Limited (ASX: DTS) is pleased to announce the appointment of Mr. Simon Wilkinson to the position of Chief Technology Officer based in the company's new Research & Development facility in Melbourne. This appointment comes at a pivotal time for the company, as Dragontail Systems manages growing demand for its two flagship products – "Algo" and "QT" (a computer-vision quality management system) – in the Asia Pacific region.

Supporting this growth, the company is opening a Research & Development facility in Melbourne to deepen technical and professional support for current and future clients. This builds on the company's recently established Singapore office, to accelerate its growth ambitions in the region.

Mr. Wilkinson joins Dragontail Systems from Predictive Hire, a HR technology company, where he served as Chief Technology Officer. During his time at Predictive Hire, Mr. Wilkinson built a cloud based SaaS platform that is secure, globally deployable and internet scalable. Prior to this, he was Chief Technology Officer at Pearson International, the world's largest education company, where he led the global integration and development of a cloud based content management system.

Ido Levanon, Dragontail System's Chief Executive Officer, said: "We have identified Australia and the Asia Pacific region as key growth markets, so it makes sense that we are really excited about these developments. Simon's appointment brings a wealth of relevant experience to our team, and together with our new offices in Australia and Singapore, sharpens our focus towards developing major opportunities we see in the region for Dragontail System's unique technology platform that provides end-to-end support for businesses and not just delivery optimisation."

Mr. Wilkinson holds a Master of Science and a Bachelor of Applied Science from Curtin University of Technology and attended Royal Melbourne Institute of Technology. He has received several industry awards and certifications.
